I know that I want to be in a relationship, but with time on my hands and to the so called doldrums of winter (especially given that I have my surgery and cycle to get over, on the 23rd March) I have had some down time. What a revelation to hear the term 'good luck' in a different context to 'break a leg'. There are times when I receive the odd email, text or letter asking me, that is for someone else, to do things for them that I know that I have no intention of doing at all. I had a call from the doctor's secretary asking me to have a 'chat' with a friend about a result that had come back after a biopsy. All the same, I was surprised that they actually asked. So I had the chat but hardly wanted to tell her what I really thought which is that that woman is mad. But the strange thing is that the thing about being asked to do something is that it does manage to remind you that you are a bit of a charity. If I hear the expression 'good luck with your next series' then I know that I am about to get asked to come up with a solution for some problem in my life. If I hear that someone wants a good team to do something for them that is both important and right then I know that they want me to do it. If I hear the term 'good luck' then I know that the person is recommending me as a person that I want to invite to my wedding, because I am told by them, that I am good with my friends. In my own case, I find that I usually have to come up with a solution myself. So, I come across as a good luck charm and I love it. And I just want to end
