to send images and videos with 140 character text overlays, expanding on its press release that launched the feature last month. The new capability, which allows users to add text to pictures or videos to make a photo “spank funny,” will be available within the Twitter app on Android, iOS and the web, the company said today in a blog post. The new tool could be an attempt to appeal to consumers after Snapchat, also launched in 2011, transformed how people take and share photos. Twitter is not the first company to try to wade into the water between Snapchat and Instagram. In July, Facebook introduced Stories, a way to share 24-hour periods of time-lapse video, and it seemed to invite Instagram users to move to Facebook. {#Sec9} ===== This prospective, randomised controlled trial shows that 1 year of SRPS and rehabilitation exercise had the same clinical outcomes for the treatment of secondary lymphedema following mastectomy for breast cancer as compared to control therapy. There were no differences in the number of weekly sessions or the total amount of exercise performed in both groups. Our findings add to the literature by demonstrating the feasibility of implementing a comprehensive lymphedema program in the community. Despite only the treatment group having a lymphedema self-efficacy questionnaire available at the completion of the study, consistent improvements in these measures were seen in both groups. The maintenance of these improvements should be explored in a larger randomised controlled trial. The treatment group also improved their maximum walking distance and the ability to maintain balance, but not arm swelling and lung capacity. These findings corroborate a number of previous trials of exercise in the management of lymphedema which found that exercise reduces arm swelling and increases arm mobility and functional capacity \[[@CR4], [@CR8], [@CR14]\]. The reason for this is unclear. It may be that this is a reflection of an effect on the extracellular matrix which is well recognized in lymphedema \[[@CR15]\], and therefore a symptom that is more responsive to changes in lymphatic drainage. It is not known if the improvements in exercise self-efficacy were a consequence of the lymphedema intervention or a surrogate for a reduced belief in the relevance of lymphedema and therefore a reduced desire to exercise.

Previous RCTs of exercise in lymphedema have all used self-efficacy measurements as an outcome measure \[[@CR8], [CR14], [CR16]\] but the relationship between these measurements and patients' beliefs in their ability to carry out exercise has not been explored. The recent lymphedema intervention RCT by Ali et al. \[[@CR4]\] found that lymphedema self-
